NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION

TO: ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on August 11, 2016, at 8:00 a.m. before the Honorable William Alsup, United States District Judge, at the United States District Court, Northern District of California, San Francisco Courthouse, Courtroom 8 - 19th Floor, 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102, George Cohen, David Moss, and Roxanne Xenakis ("Plaintiffs") will move this Court for an order, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1447(c), to award Plaintiffs fees and remand this action to the Superior Court of the State of California, County of San Mateo. This motion is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion, the Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support Thereof, the Proposed Order filed herewith, all pleadings and papers filed herein, arguments of counsel, and any other matters properly before the Court.

ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

1. Was Defendants'<sup>1</sup> removal of this case to federal court under 28 U.S.C. §1441(a) barred by the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act" or "1933 Act")?

2. Assuming removal was barred and that this Court therefore lacks subject matter jurisdiction, should this case, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1447(c), be remanded to the Superior Court of the State of California, County of San Mateo?

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

On May 12, 2016, Defendants removed the action to this Court under 28 U.S.C. §1441(a), which authorizes removal of federal claims "[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided by Act of Congress." See Notice of Removal of State Court Civil Action (ECF No. 1) ("Defs' Notice" or "Defendants' Notice") at 3. This action was filed in state court under the express jurisdiction of the <sup>1</sup> "Defendants" refer to Sunrun Inc. ("Sunrun" or the "Company"), Lynn Jurich, Bob Komin, Edward Fenster, Jameson McJunkin, Gerald Risk, Steve Vassallo, Richard Wong, Beau Peelle, Eren Omer Atesmen, Reginald Norris, William Elmore, Foundation Capital VI, L.P., Foundation Capital Management Co. VI, LLC, Credit Suisse Securities (USA) LLC, Goldman, Sachs & Co., KeyBanc Capital Markets Inc., Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Incorporated, Morgan Stanley & Co. LLC, RBC Capital Markets, LLC, and SunTrust Robinson Humphrey, Inc.

1 1933 Act, and it was removed contrary to the 1933 Act’s anti-removal bar and contrary to the 2 Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 (“SLUSA”), thus imposing unnecessary delay.<sup>2</sup>
 3 Removal is improper. Unfortunately, though, the removal has already met its primary – though 4 nonetheless improper – goal.

5 Indeed, delay is the purpose of this removal and in support of their removal, Defendants
 6 recycle the very arguments that judges in the Northern District of California and elsewhere have 7 been uniformly rejecting over and over again. The next-to-the-last remand in the Northern District
 8 of California was just two months ago, before Judge Freeman. See Iron Workers Mid-South Pension
 9 Fund v. TerraForm Global, Inc., No. 15-CV-6328-BLF, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27753, at *17-*18
 10 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2016) (“TerraForm”) (Freeman, J.). In TerraForm, Judge Freeman awarded 11 plaintiffs fees under 28 U.S.C. §1447(c), holding defendants’ “tactics waste the time and resources
 12 of all parties and the courts in this district.” Id., at *17. And this Court remanded under identical
 13 circumstances in Desmarais v. Johnson, No. C 13-03666 WHA, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153165, at 14 *8-*9 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 22, 2013). Most recently, Judge Chen remanded under identical
 15 circumstances in Elec. Workers Local #357 Pension & Health & Wellness Trusts v. Clovis
 16 Oncology, Inc., No. 16-cv-00933-EMC, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086 (N.D. Cal. May 5, 2016)
 17 (“Clovis”).

18 For years now, every judge that has considered the issue in the Northern District of 19 California, and judges elsewhere in the Ninth Circuit and in other circuits across the country, have 20 agreed that the Securities Act strictly forbids the removal of cases like this one brought in state court,
 21 and that SLUSA did not eliminate concurrent state court jurisdiction. See infra §II.B & nn.4-5.
 22 During this time, “every court in this district to address the issue has granted remand.” Buelow v.
 23

24 <sup>2</sup> This securities class action was commenced in the Superior Court of the State of California,
 25 County of San Mateo, on April 21, 2016, on behalf of all persons who purchased or otherwise
 26 acquired the common stock of Sunrun pursuant or traceable to the registration statement and 27 prospectus issued in connection with Sunrun’s initial public offering commenced August 5, 2015
 (the “Offering”). See Defs’ Notice, Ex. A Part 2. The action asserts claims solely under §§11, 12(a)(2) and 15 of the Securities Act against Sunrun, certain Sunrun officers and directors, certain venture capital firms subject to liability as control persons, and the underwriters of the Offering.

1 Alibaba Grp. Holding Ltd., No. 15-cv-05179-BLF, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7444, at *9-*10 (N.D.
2 Cal. Jan. 20, 2016) (Freeman, J.).<sup>3</sup>

3 As Judge Chen stated in Clovis, defendants' interpretation of the 1933 Act and SLUSA "is 4 without merit." 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086, at *14. And as Judge Koh held in Liu v. Xoom
5 Corp., No. 15-cv-00602-LHK, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82830 (N.D. Cal. June 25, 2015).
6 "Defendants' position has been soundly rejected in recent years" (id. at *9), the arguments
7 defendants make here are "unconvincing" (id. at *12), and the "legislative history Defendants cite is 8 hardly overwhelming." Id. Likewise, Judge Orrick held, "removal of the action is barred by the 9 antiremoval provision in section 77v(a)." Plymouth Cty. Ret. Sys. v. Model N, Inc., No. 14-cv-
10 04516-WHO, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1104, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 5, 2015). Judge Chhabria
11 followed the rulings of Judge Orrick, and Judge Koh, granting remand, in Kerley v. MobileIron Inc., 12 No. 15-cv-04416-VC, Order Granting Motion to Remand (N.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2015). See id. at 1.
13 Judge Gilliam, in City of Warren Police & Fire Ret. Sys. v. Revance Therapeutics, Inc., 125 F. Supp.
14 3d 917 (N.D. Cal. 2015) ("Revance"), held "the exception permitting removal does not apply, and 15 Defendants are barred from removing the instant lawsuit to federal court." Id. at 920. This Court
16 held "[s]ection 77v(a) 'strictly forbids the removal of cases'" such as this one. Desmarais, 2013
17 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153165, at *8-*9. So too, did Judge Freeman. See Buelow, 2016 U.S. Dist.
18 LEXIS 7444, at *9. Judge Davila echoed, 1933 Act cases such as this one are "prohibited from 19 removal pursuant to §77v." Young v. Pac. Biosciences of Cal., Inc., No. 5:11-cv-05668, 2012 U.S.
20 Dist. LEXIS 33695, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2012). Judge Hamilton held that "the removal bar 21 in §77v(a) (the jurisdictional provision) prohibits removal of" an action like this one. Cervantes v.
22 Dickerson, No. 15-cv-3825-PJH, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 143390, at *10 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 21, 2015).
23 Judge Armstrong held that "the 1933 Act's removal bar applies and forecloses removal of" these 24 actions. Harper v. Smart Techs Inc., No. C 11-5232 SBA, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 191130, at *13
25 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2012). Judge Wilken held this type of action is not "facially removable as a

1 federal question.” Toth v. Envivo, Inc., No. C 12-5636 CW, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151767, at *3
 2 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 17, 2013). In Pac. Inv. Mgmt. Co. LLC v. Am. Int’l Grp., Inc., No. SA CV-15-0687-
 3 DOC (DFMx), 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 75355 (C.D. Cal. June 10, 2015), Judge Carter held that 4 1933 Act cases, like this case, are not precluded under 15 U.S.C. §77p(b), “the state court retains 5 jurisdiction” (id. at *19), the “text of the statute” precludes removal (id. at *21), and the “action was 6 removed improperly and without jurisdiction.” Id. at *22.

7 This case, too, should be remanded, and if possible, without delay, to avoid the harm caused
 8 by defendants’ tactics of injecting unnecessary passage of time into this action. Therefore, Plaintiffs 9 respectfully assert this Court lacks jurisdiction and must remand, and requests an order imposing just 10 costs and expenses pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1447(c).

11 II. ARGUMENT

12 The Securities Act removal bar is dispositive notwithstanding SLUSA. As this Court, and 13 Judges Wilken, Koh, Armstrong, White, Davila, Hamilton, Chen, Freeman, Orrick, Carter, Gilliam,
 14 and Chhabria have held in analogous cases, the Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. §77v(a), prohibits removal
 15 of the 1933 Act cases brought in state court and SLUSA does not eliminate concurrent state court
 16 jurisdiction of such cases. See infra at 5 & n.4. Because Defendants removed this action in 17 contravention of the Securities Act and SLUSA, this Court lacks jurisdiction and must remand.

18 A. Legal Standard: Removal Statutes Are Strictly Construed Against 19 Removal and Any Doubt as to Removal Favors Remand, for There Is a Strong Presumption Against Removal

20 “The removal jurisdiction of the federal courts is derived entirely from the statutory 21 authorization of Congress.” Libhart v. Santa Monica Dairy Co., 592 F.2d 1062, 1064 (9th Cir.
 22 1979). Because “[t]he right of removal is entirely a creature of statute,” “a suit commenced in a
 23 state court must remain there until cause is shown for its transfer under some act of Congress.”
 24 Syngenta Crop Prot., Inc. v. Henson, 537 U.S. 28, 32 (2002). All such “removal statutes are strictly 25 construed against removal,” Luther v. Countrywide Home Loans Servicing LP, 533 F.3d 1031, 1034
 26 (9th Cir. 2008), and “[f]ederal jurisdiction must be rejected if there is any doubt as to the right of 27 removal in the first instance.” Gaus v. Miles, Inc., 980 F.2d 564, 566 (9th Cir. 1992) (citing Libhart,

1 592 F.2d at 1064).

2 “The ‘strong presumption’ against removal jurisdiction means that the defendant always has 3 the burden of establishing that removal is proper.” Gaus, 980 F.2d at 566. “If at any time before
4 final judgment it appears that the district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the case shall be
5 remanded.” 28 U.S.C. §1447(c); Libhart, 592 F.2d at 1065 (“28 U.S.C. §1447(c) require[s] the court
6 to remand” if it even “appears that the case was removed improvidently”). Thus, “any doubt about 7 the right of removal requires resolution in favor of remand.” Moore-Thomas v. Alaska Airlines, Inc., 8 553 F.3d 1241, 1244 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Gaus, 980 F.2d at 566); Luther, 533 F.3d at 1034 (“any 9 doubt is resolved against removability”).

10 B. The Securities Act Removal Bar Warrants Remand

11 The removal statute Defendants invoke here, 28 U.S.C. §1441(a), authorizes removal of state 12 court actions asserting federal claims, “[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided by Act of 13 Congress.” “[T]he limiting language – ‘[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided by Act of 14 Congress’ – thus carv[es] out potential express exceptions to such removal jurisdiction.” Serrano v.
15 180 Connect, Inc., 478 F.3d 1018, 1023 (9th Cir. 2007); Syngenta, 537 U.S. at 33 (“The general
16 removal statute, 28 U.S.C. §1441, provides that ‘any [such] civil action . . . may be removed’ . . .
17 unless Congress specifically provides otherwise.”).

18 “The Securities Act of 1933 contains an express removal bar that falls within the exception to 19 §1441(a).” Rajasekaran v. CytRx Corp., No. CV 14-3406-GHK (PJWx), 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20 124550, at *5 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2014) (citing Luther, 533 F.3d at 1034 (“the Securities Act of 21 1933 provides such an express exception to removal”)). See also Clovis, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS

23 7444, at *9 (Freeman, J.) (“§77v(a) ‘strictly forbids removal of cases brought in state court and

25 to Remand at 1 (adopting analyses of Judge Koh in Liu and Judge Orrick in Plymouth Cty., below); 26 Cervantes, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 143390, at *9 (Hamilton, J.) (“the removal bar in §77v(a) (the 27 jurisdictional provision) prohibits removal of the action”); Revance, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 920 (Gilliam, Jr., J.) (“Defendants are barred from removing the instant lawsuit to federal court.”); Liu, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82830, at *8 (“section 77v(a)’s provision barring removal of ‘case[s] arising under this subchapter’ prohibits Defendants from removing the instant lawsuit to federal court”); Plymouth Cty., No. 14-CV-04516-WHO, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1104, at *7 (Orrick, J.) (“removal of the action is barred by the antiremoval provision in section 77v(a)”); Desmarais, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153165, at *8-*9 (Alsup, J.) (“Section 77v(a) ‘strictly forbids the removal of’” such cases as this one.); Harper, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 191130, at *13 (Armstrong, J.) (“the 1933 Act’s removal bar applies and forecloses removal of the action”); Young, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33695, at *11 (Davila, J.) (“prohibited from removal pursuant to §77v”); Toth v. Envivo, Inc., No. C 12-5636 CW, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147569, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 11, 2013) (Wilken, J.) (15 U.S.C. §77v(a) is “an anti-removal provision”).

Indeed, the United States Supreme Court has described 15 U.S.C. §77v(a) as an “indisputable prohibition[] of removal.” Breuer v. Jim’s Concrete of Brevard, Inc., 538 U.S. 691, 696-97 (2003) (also stating 15 U.S.C. §77v(a) in “unmistakable terms” “‘give[s] plaintiffs an absolute choice of forum’”). As Judge Orrick stated in Plymouth Cty.:

The jurisdictional provision placed unqualified concurrent jurisdiction over Securities Act claims in both state and federal courts, while the antiremoval provision stated, “No case arising under this subchapter and brought in any State court of competent jurisdiction shall be removed to any court of the United States.”

2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1104, at *5.

The language in §22(a) of the Securities Act, 15 U.S.C. §77v(a), “broadly prohibits removal of 1933 Act cases brought in state court, with one exception: ‘[e]xcept as provided in section 77p(c) of this title.’” CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *15-*16 (quoting 15 U.S.C. §77v(a)). The §77p(c) exception applies only to “covered class action[s] . . . as set forth in subsection (b),” which in turn applies only to “covered class action[s] based upon the statutory or common law of any State.” 15 U.S.C. §77p(b)-(c). Thus, under the plain language of the statute, “no case arising under [the Securities Act] . . . shall be removed” unless “based upon the statutory or common law of any State.” 15 U.S.C. §§77v(a), 77p(b). But this action alleges only claims for violations of the 1933

1 Act. Indeed, the consensus of judges in the Northern District of California and elsewhere in the 2 United States holds that the anti-removal exception does not apply here. E.g., Revance, 125 F. Supp.
 3 3d at 920 (“the exception permitting removal does not apply”); Liu, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82830,
 4 at *8 (“the antiremoval exception does not apply”). See also supra at 5 (citing orders by additional
 5 judges in Northern District of California holding the anti-removal bar applies and not the exception
 6 permitting removal); infra nn.4-5 (same, including orders by judges throughout the United States).

7 Defendants’ Notice ignores the removal bar and asserts “SLUSA amended the Securities
 8 Act” (Defs’ Notice at 3) and “removed concurrent state court jurisdiction” (id. at 4) of the San Mateo
 9 County Superior Court. But this assertion has been rejected by this Court and repeatedly rejected by 10 judges here considering the same argument. See Revance, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 918, 920 (recognizing 11 “concurrent jurisdiction over Securities Act claims” and SLUSA amendments to 1933 Act and 12 holding “[s]ince Plaintiff’s complaint alleged only federal Securities Act claims, and no claims
 13 under state law, the exception permitting removal does not apply, and Defendants are barred from 14 removing the instant lawsuit to federal court”) (emphasis in original). Recently it was Judge
 15 Freeman that rejected this old argument:

16 Defendants argue, the state court where this case was initially filed is not a “court of 17 competent jurisdiction” for this case and §77v(a)’s anti-removal language is therefore inapplicable here.

18 Considering the statute as a whole, the Court finds Plaintiffs’ reading of the statutory 19 language more persuasive. The most straightforward reading of the provisions is that 20 only covered class actions with state law claims can be removed to federal court, as provided in §77p(c), and only for the purpose of dismissing the state law claims, as required by §77p(b).

21 Buelow, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7444, at *7-*8. See also Clovis, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086, at 22 *29 (“the plain language of the statute requires remand”). Likewise, as this Court held in Desmarais 23 after analyzing the plain language of SLUSA, “[b]ecause removal was expressly restricted to 24 covered class actions based on state law, as plaintiffs contend, defendants should not have removed 25 the 1933 Act claims here.” Desmarais, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153165, at *7. Accord Plymouth
 26 Cty., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1104, at *7 (“because [plaintiff] brings only Securities Act claims, not 27 state law claims, removal of the action is barred by the antiremoval provision in section 77v(a)”);

 2 *21 (same); Reyes v. Zynga Inc., No. C 12-05065 JSW, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146465 (N.D. Cal.
 3 Jan. 23, 2013) (White, J.) (same conclusion, analyzing plain language of 1933 Act and SLUSA);
 4 Toth, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147569, at *3-*7 (Wilken, J.) (same); Young, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
 5 33695, at *7-*12 (Davila, J.) (same); CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *8 (“The most
 6 natural, straightforward reading of these provisions is that only covered class actions based upon
 7 state law. . . can be removed to federal court . . . . Nothing in the plain language of the statute
 8 suggests that SLUSA created any other basis for removal . . .”).

9       The numerous district judges that have granted remand of 1933 Act cases find persuasive and 10 instructive the following decisions of the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit. E.g., Liu, 2015 U.S.
 11 Dist. LEXIS 82830, at *10 (finding plaintiffs’ position is supported by dicta from both the Supreme 12 Court and the Ninth Circuit); Revance, 125 F. Supp. 3d at 920 (same). See also supra at 5 (citing
 13 orders by additional judges in Northern District of California); infra nn.4-5 (same, including orders
 14 by judges throughout the United States). In Kircher, the Supreme Court analyzed this very statutory 15 language and stated, “we read authorization for the removal in subsection (c) . . . as confined to cases
 16 ‘set forth in subsection (b).’” Kircher v. Putnam Funds Tr., 547 U.S. 633, 642 (2006) (quoting 15 17 U.S.C. §77p(c)). Thus, the Supreme Court explained, “removal and jurisdiction to deal with 18 removed cases is limited to those precluded by the terms of subsection (b)” and, consequently, if an 19 “action is not precluded [under subsection (b)], the federal court . . . has no [removal] jurisdiction to 20 touch the case on the merits, and the proper course is to remand to the state court that can deal with 21 it.” Id. at 643-44.

22       Relying on the Supreme Court’s analysis in Kircher, the Ninth Circuit has twice reached the 23 same conclusion. See Madden v. Cowen & Co., 576 F.3d 957, 965 (9th Cir. 2009) (“As the Supreme 24 Court has explained, any suit removable under . . . §77p(c), is precluded under . . . §77p(b), and any 25 suit not precluded is not removable.”); Luther, 533 F.3d at 1033 (the Securities Act removal bar
 26 “strictly forbids the removal of cases brought in state court and asserting claims under the Securities
 27 Act”). As the Court in Niitsoo stated:

1 The statements in Kircher are not merely relevant dicta from which a lower court can
 2 draw parallels in reasoning – these are particularly strong dicta that address the exact
 3 issue of statutory interpretation that is before [the Court] today, and that has been 4 before the dozens of district courts that have performed similar analyses in the past.

5 Niitsoo v. Alpha Natural Res., Inc., 902 F. Supp. 2d 797, 803 (S.D. W.Va. 2012). See also infra
 6 §II.C.

7 Defendants’ Notice ignores the substantial authority against it and cites cases and analyses
 8 that have been rejected for years now. But the purported crux of defendants’ removal, i.e., that 9 “[f]ederal courts have exclusive jurisdiction over class actions that assert claims under the Securities
 10 Act” (Defs’ Notice at 3) and “SLUSA . . . removed concurrent state court jurisdiction over ‘covered 11 class actions’ that assert Securities Act claims” (id. at 4) has been repeatedly raised and rejected in 12 this District and across the country. See supra at 6-7; infra nn.4-5. In fact, Knox v. Agria Corp., 613
 13 F. Supp. 2d 419, 425 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), and the analysis therein has been rejected and discredited for 14 some time now, and the other cases Defendants cite, which rely on Knox, have suffered the same
 15 fate. This also goes for the recent out-of-circuit decision that relies on Knox and those other 16 criticized cases. Hung v. iDreamSky Tech. Ltd., 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8389 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 25,
 17 2016). See infra at 11-13 & n.6 (discussing response of judges in the Northern District of California
 18 and elsewhere to the cases cited by defendants); infra nn.4-5 (citing courts finding defendants’
 19 arguments unpersuasive); Clovis, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086, at *24-*26 (district courts “reject[]
 20 the kind of statutory interpretation advocated” by defendants, and “reject[] Hung”) (finding Lapin
 21 “not persuasive”). By way of further example, defendants cite a terse, two-paragraph memorandum 22 decision from the District of Maryland, which does little more than simply conclude: “I agree with 23 the decision in Knox v. Agria Corp., 613 F. Supp. 2d 419 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) . . . .” Wunsch v. Am.
 24 Realty Capital Props., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 48759, at *1 (D. Md. Apr. 14, 2015). As Judge
 25 Gilliam held in Revance, referring to Wunsch, “[t]o the Court’s knowledge, only a single district
 26 court in any district has denied remand since August 2012 – and that denial took the form of a 27 summary two-paragraph order.” 125 F. Supp. 3d at 921.

At least 12 judges in this District have found removal of Securities Act cases prohibited by §77v(a) and that result has been unanimous in recent years.<sup>4</sup> So too have the vast majority of district courts within California remanded 1933 Act cases, as well as district courts throughout the Ninth Circuit, and nationwide. See, e.g., CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *9 (King, J.) (collecting cases, finding this interpretation to be the “majority view,” and finding “the reasoning of the courts that have adopted it much more persuasive than those that have gone the other way”); *Pac. LEXIS 82830, at *9 (The Northern District of California has “soundly rejected” defendants’ position in recent years.).

This action falls squarely within the Securities Act removal bar because Plaintiffs asserts no state law claims. Defs’ Notice, Ex. A Part 2. Under the statute’s plain language, as well as overwhelming Supreme Court, Ninth Circuit, and district court authority, this Court thus lacks jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1441(a) and must remand under 28 U.S.C. §1447(c).

C. SLUSA Did Not Eliminate Concurrent State Court Jurisdiction

Defendants’ failure to even address the Securities Act removal bar alone warrants remand. See CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *5 (“As the party asserting jurisdiction, [defendant] bears the burden of establishing that this action is not barred by the [Securities Act] anti-removal provision.”) (citing Madden, 576 F.3d at 975-76). Further, Defendants’ contention that the SLUSA amendments to the Securities Act “removed concurrent state court jurisdiction” (Defs’ Notice at 4) is incorrect. The statute’s plain language and legislative history, as well as Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit interpretation thereof, are all to the contrary.

As amended by SLUSA, §22(a) of the Securities Act states:

The district courts of the United States . . . shall have jurisdiction of offenses and violations under this title . . . concurrent with State and Territorial courts, except as provided in Section 16 [§77p] with respect to covered class actions, of all suits in equity and actions at law brought to enforce any liability or duty created by this title.

15 U.S.C. §77v(a). According to defendants, SLUSA amended the Securities Act to “remove[] concurrent state court jurisdiction.” Defs’ Notice at 4. That is incorrect, as judges in this District and elsewhere have repeatedly held.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Defendants cite several out-of-circuit cases, and one in-circuit case, in purported support for their proposition. But these cases have since been discredited implicitly, if not expressly, by the courts stating the dominant, majority view. As Judge White stated in Reyes, “in cases such as Lapin

Defendants apparently contend that the added phrase “except as provided in [§77p] . . . with respect to covered class actions” eliminated concurrent jurisdiction over Securities Act claims raised with respect to “covered” securities. Defs’ Notice at 3; 15 U.S.C. §77v(a). “The plain language of the statute does not support this reading.” CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *12. As the court in CytRx explained:

The key lies in §77p, which is broadly incorporated into the clause at issue. This section contains four subsections that refer to “covered class actions.” However, none of these four subsections pertains to claims arising under the 1933 Act. Three of the four provisions “deal exclusively” with actions based upon state law. And of all of the provisions, only subsection (b) imposes any jurisdictional limitations, and even still, those limitations apply only to class actions “based upon the statutory or common law of any State.” The only subsection that references “covered class actions” without limiting itself to those based on state law, §77p(f), sets forth the definitions that apply “for purposes of [§77p],” including the definition of “covered class action.” 15 U.S.C. §77p(f)(2). This subsection therefore serves the function of defining the universe of covered class actions from which the §77p(b) subset can be identified. It does nothing to overwhelm §77p’s focus on state law claims. If 77v(a) had incorporated only this specific subsection, there might be some textual footing for [defendant]’s argument that SLUSA eliminated state law and Knox,” cited by defendants here, “the courts focused their analysis on the language of Section 77v(a) and have found that state courts no longer have concurrent jurisdiction over class actions asserting claims under the 1933 Act.” 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146465, at *9. But, Judge White found “cases such as Young and Unschuld to be more persuasive about the manner in which Section 77v(c) should be interpreted.” Id. at *10. Likewise, Judge Wilken, after referring to the Lapin case cited by defendants, instead chose “the majority approach in this district” (Toth, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 147569, at *6) and also cited Lapin as contrary to opinions by “more than a dozen district courts around the country – including two [now five] in this district [that] have construed section 77p(c) to preclude removal in cases like this one.” Toth, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151767, at *4 n.1. Similarly, Judge Orrick in Plymouth Cty. found that plaintiff “has the better of these arguments,” disagreeing that “SLUSA strips state courts of concurrent jurisdiction,” and noting that even a judge that previously denied remand “reversed her position.” 2015 U.S. Dist. And This Court held that the reasoning of the courts cited by defendants here “would ignore the express inclusion of the . . . language in Section 77v(a)’s provision on removal” and to do so “would contradict the ‘cardinal principle of statutory construction that we must give effect, if possible, to every clause and word of a statute.’” Desmarais, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 153165, at *10 (quoting Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 404 (2000)). See also STEC, 2011 U.S. Dist. Even judges cited for denying remand have reconsidered. See, e.g., Layne, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 123896, at *3-*4 n.1 (Pfaelzer, J.) (“In considering the issue again, the Court now has available a number of more recent authorities that inform the analysis and prompt the conclusion that remand is appropriate.”). And Judge Chen stated in Clovis: “Clovis’s analysis is hardly new. jurisdiction over all covered class actions arising under the Act. But the language that was inserted into the first sentence of the jurisdictional provision instead references the entirety of 77p, a section that is exclusively concerned with state law class actions.

[Defendant] therefore attributes much more to SLUSA than can be reasonably inferred from the statute's plain language. The SLUSA amendment to §77v(a) does not go so far as to take all securities class actions out of state court. The better view is that the amendment to the jurisdictional provision was meant to simply acknowledge that there is now a subset of class actions that are no longer cognizable in either state or federal court – those state law class actions that are precluded by §77p(b). Had Congress intended to make federal district courts the exclusive forum for securities class actions, we presume it would have said as much. It is dubious that Congress would have instead evinced its intent by making an oblique reference to a section that is exclusively concerned with state law class actions and never directly addresses 1933 Act claims.

Id. at *12-*14.<sup>7</sup>

In Kircher, the Supreme Court rejected a similar misreading of the removal bar in §77v(a) as follows:

[Defendants] argue that removal jurisdiction is broader by emphasizing the adjective that introduces subsection (c): “Any” covered action. §77p(c). But that suggestion would be persuasive only if we stopped reading right there, and we do not stop there; we do not read statutes in little bites . . . if we did . . . there would be no point to the phrase “as set forth in subsection (b),” for subsection (b) cases would be removable anyway as a subset of covered class actions. . . . In sum, we see no reason to reject the straightforward reading: removal and jurisdiction to deal with removed cases is limited to those precluded by the terms of subsection(b).

Once removal jurisdiction under subsection (c) is understood to be restricted to precluded actions defined by subsection (b), a motion to remand claiming the action is not precluded must be seen as posing a jurisdictional issue. . . . If the action is not precluded, the federal court likewise has no jurisdiction to touch the case on the merits, and the proper course is to remand to the state court that can deal with it.

547 U.S. at 643-44; see also id. at 646 (“nothing in the [Securities] Act gives the federal courts

<sup>7</sup> See also Niitsoo, 902 F. Supp. 2d at 805 n.4 (finding it “unlikely that Congress would effectuate an abrupt jurisdictional stripping by making an unspecific reference to §77p without any signal in §77p(f) that the definition of ‘covered class action’ was meant to serve as the parameters of the federal courts’ exclusive jurisdiction”); STEC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146846, at *14-*15 n.5 (“The drafters of the jurisdictional provision could have easily stated that the provision’s exception was for all covered class actions defined in section 77p(f). Instead, the jurisdictional provision states that concurrent jurisdiction exists except as provided in section 77p generally. Thus, the jurisdictional provision does impose a substantive limitation to the exception to concurrent jurisdiction by providing that courts possess concurrent jurisdiction ‘except as provided in section 77p.’”); accord Luther, 195 Cal. App. 4th at 798 (“15 United States Code section 77v does not say ‘except as provided in section 77p(f)(2),’ the definition of covered class action. Instead, it refers to all of 15 United States Code section 77p, not just the definitional provision.”).

exclusive jurisdiction,” and thus “a defendant can elect to leave a case where the plaintiff filed it and trust the state court (an equally competent body)”). Consistent with Kircher, the Ninth Circuit continues to explicitly recognize that “[t]he Securities Act of 1933 . . . provides concurrent jurisdiction in state and federal courts over alleged violations of the Act.” Luther, 533 F.3d at 1033. In short, a correct reading of the statute’s plain language establishes that the SLUSA amendments did not eliminate concurrent state court jurisdiction.

Because the plain language of the Securities Act is unambiguous, recourse to legislative intent is unnecessary. See Conn. Nat’l Bank v. Germain, 503 U.S. 249, 253-54 (1992) (“[C]ourts must presume that a legislature says in a statute what it means and means in a statute what it says there. When the words of a statute are unambiguous, then, this first canon is also the last: ‘judicial inquiry is complete.’”); Calpine, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15832, at *6 (“where the language of the statute is clear, it is not up to the Court to modify it to effect Congress’s likely intent”). “Even if the plain language of the statute were ambiguous so as to make the legislative history of SLUSA relevant, the legislative history supports the Court’s conclusion.” Clovis, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086, at *26. SLUSA’s legislative history shows that the SLUSA amendments did not eliminate concurrent state court jurisdiction.

For example, the very first sentence of the SLUSA Senate Committee Report (“Senate Report”) states:

The Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 1260), to amend the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to limit the conduct of securities class actions under State law . . . .

S. Rep. No. 105-182, at 1 (1998). The Senate Report continues: “The amendment makes clear the Committee’s intention to enact this legislation in order to prevent state laws from being used to frustrate the operation and goals of the 1995 Reform Act.” Id. at 2. In its section-by-section analysis of the proposed amendments, the Senate Report explains the removal provision as follows:

Subsection 16(b) provides that no class action based on State law alleging fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of covered securities may be maintained in State or Federal court.

Subsection 16(c) provides that any class action described in Subsection (b) that is brought in a State court shall be removable to a Federal district court, and may be dismissed pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b).

Id. at 7. The Senate Report further explains that “the majority would preempt securities fraud causes of action under State law” (id. at 8) and that SLUSA “would preempt State law securities actions.”

Id. at 11. Also that SLUSA “would preempt securities fraud class actions brought under State law. Investors seeking to file class action lawsuits would be forced to file under the Federal securities laws.” Id. at 14. Nowhere in the Senate Report is there any reference to eliminating concurrent state court jurisdiction over Securities Act claims.

Nor is there any such reference in the House of Representatives’ Committee Report (“House Report”), the first sentence of which mirrors that of the Senate Report:

The Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 1689) to amend the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 to limit the conduct of securities class actions under State law . . . .

H.R. Rep. No. 105-640, at 1 (1998). The House Report continues by stating that “it preempts securities fraud class actions brought under State law” (id. at 13) and explains:

Subsection 16(b) provides that no class action based on State law alleging fraud in connection with the purchase or sale of covered securities may be maintained in State or Federal court.

Subsection 16(c) provides that any class action described in subsection (b) that is brought in a State court shall be removable to a Federal district court, and may be dismissed pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b). This provision is designed to prevent a State court from inadvertently, improperly, or otherwise maintaining jurisdiction over an action that is preempted pursuant to subsection (b).

Id. at 17. Again, nowhere in the House Report is there any reference to eliminating concurrent state court jurisdiction over Securities Act claims.

The House of Representatives’ Conference Report (“Conference Report”) echoes the Senate and House Reports, emphasizing SLUSA as designed “to limit the conduct of securities class actions under State law.” H.R. Rep. No. 105-803, at 1 (1998). As with the Senate and House Reports, nowhere in the Conference Report is there any reference to eliminating concurrent state court jurisdiction over Securities Act claims.

The Ninth Circuit’s analysis of SLUSA’s legislative history has consistently found the same:

1 SLUSA’s “only discernible intent was to preclude the use of the class-action device to prosecute
 2 certain state-law class action claims.” Proctor v. Vishay Intertechnology Inc., 584 F.3d 1208, 1227-
 3 28 (9th Cir. 2009); Madden, 576 F.3d at 964 (“SLUSA sought to . . . generally preclud[e] ‘covered
 4 class actions’ alleging fraud or misrepresentation under state law in connection with ‘covered
 5 securities.’”). This “only discernible intent” has nothing to do with concurrent state court
 6 jurisdiction over federal Securities Act claims.

7 At bottom, “[h]ad Congress intended to make federal district courts the exclusive forum for 8 securities class actions . . . it would have said as much.” CytRx, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at 9 *14. Accord Clovis, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60086, at *29 (“but it did not do so”). “It is dubious
 10 that Congress would have instead evinced its intent by making an oblique reference to a section that 11 is exclusively concerned with state law class actions and never directly addresses 1933 Act claims.”
 12 CytRX, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 124550, at *14.<sup>8</sup> As such, SLUSA did not eliminate concurrent state
 13 court jurisdiction under the Securities Act.

14 D. Plaintiffs Requests Award of Costs and Expenses

15 As Judge Wilken held in Toth, this action is not “‘facially removable as a federal question.’”
 16 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151767, at *3. Likewise, Judge Freeman held in TerraForm, “Defendants’
 17 reliance on mostly out-of-district cases to support their position ignores the growing and uniform
 18 body of law in this district, including relevant Ninth Circuit case law, reaching the opposite attorney fees, incurred as a result of the removal.” The removal here lacked a reasonable basis in light of the fact that for years now courts have consistently foreclosed removal of 1933 Act cases, recognizing the Securities Act’s indisputable removal bar and that SLUSA did not eviscerate concurrent jurisdiction of state courts in 1933 Act cases. See supra nn.4-5. Accordingly, Plaintiffs respectfully requests that the Court’s order provide that Plaintiffs may apply for an award of attorneys’ fees not later than 30 days from the date the Court’s order is filed if the parties cannot agree on the amount.

III. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, Plaintiffs respectfully requests that the Court remand this action to the Superior Court of the State of California, County of San Mateo. Because Defendants’ purpose in delaying the action has already been served by this improper removal, Plaintiffs respectfully request the Court rule on this motion to remand expeditiously, and grant costs and expenses.
